

Tote the Apple Magic Trackpad Safely with a WaterField Designs Slip or Socket Case

Keep track of your Apple accessories with protective cases from WaterField Designs

San Francisco, CA, August 3, 2010—WaterField Designs announces two new protective cases for Apple's ultra-thin, Magic Trackpad. Mobile professionals may now carry their Trackpad in the minimalist Trackpad Slip case that safeguards the device with ballistic nylon and light padding; or in the Trackpad Socket, a soft, padded pouch. WaterField also offers Keyboard cases to tote the keyboard and accessories.

The Trackpad Socket, a simple, padded, custom-fitting pouch provides scratch-free Magic Trackpad protection from other bag contents. Available in black.

The Trackpad Slip offers protection in a slim ballistic nylon case with a soft, lightly padded liner. The Apple Magic Trackpad slips easily into the custom-fitted, snug case where it stays securely in place. Six trim choices allow users to add a splash of color and/or to coordinate their case with other WaterField Designs gear.

"The Trackpad, like other gadgets, needs protection while in transit so that it does not get scratched or broken," explained Gary Waterfield, "Our cases prevent the occasional ding, scratch or spill you get when you put it in a backpack or purse along with other gear."
